

POTION and SCROLL CREATION:

All spellcasting classes begin at first level with the ability to scribe scrolls and create potions. They still must have the proper equipment required to create these items as well as money.

When creating potions or scrolls, you will no longer lose experience points. Instead you will gain experience points. The amount gained is exactly the same as the amount you would have normally lost.

This feature will allow a spellcaster to recoup some of the lost experience from creating magic items. Normally no spellcaster would ever create a magic item for anyone other than themselves because of the huge potential loss of XP. In a balanced campaign a spellcaster can now sell potions created to gain gold to create more potions or magic items that may be sold.

Spellcasters can now gain levels by creating potions and scrolls for their XP as long as they have enough money to purchase the supplies. Spellcaster who spend their entire life dedicated to study and have little time for adventuring will now be feasible. Magic shops will become available now as PC spellcasters have the time to create items and sell them to party members.